“eController” eLifespaces Introduces iPhone App

[Charleston, SC - 06/22/2009] – eLifespaces released today its eController application for the Apple iPod Touch and iPhone. eController expands your iPod Touch and iPhone to allow you to control your everyday electronic appliances.

The evolution of PAN (personal area networks) in 2007 and it's far reaching benefits to individuals, eLifespaces recognized and set out to provide insights in the product development of these new devices. Having multiple decades of experience in the audio visual industry, eLifespaces was uniquely qualified in this endeavor.

eController is a revolutionary product developed in part by eLifespaces and its other development partners to control televisions, DVD players, satellite or cable box receivers, surround sound receivers, HVAC thermostats, lighting control systems, security keypads, and more!

Your iPod Touch (or iPhone) will act as your personal remote control. Sending codes over WiFi in your home or office, eController transmits instructions directly to a controlled device, or a networked controller (if required), to execute your commands -- a stylish (and inexpensive) alternative to fancy touchpanels.

Over the past two years, a multitude of electronic manufacturers have been modifying their products to integrate with iPods and other PAN devices. Although these product modifications have taken on a more physical element, eLifespaces has captured the essence of these PAN devices by maintaining their mobile nature and allowing you to control the world around you!
